

What went right:

We were able to write up a lot more tests during this sprint. The group got better at writing more comprehensive tests. Additionally, the stories were a lot more digestible and easy to understand. The group has done a much better job of making stories we are able to complete within a two-week sprint.

What went wrong:

As a whole, the group could have had more time to communicate. We could have met a bit more outside of class to make sure that everyone was on the same page and getting their work done throughout the sprint. Since this was the sprint before the end of the term, we didn't have a chance to hold a standard sprint review with Chris. As a result, we weren't able to get full feedback on all of our stories. Going forward, this likely won't be an issue. We will also commit to trying to keep in touch with each other in future sprints.
